Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Exchange information about hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What makes you a good friend?
- At which stages of life is it easier to make friends?

Can Do Statements

- I can link an event in the present or future to another using words like while, when, as, every time, once, before, and until.
- I can talk about hypothetical or impossible situations or unfulfilled plans.
- I can write about relationships and character traits.

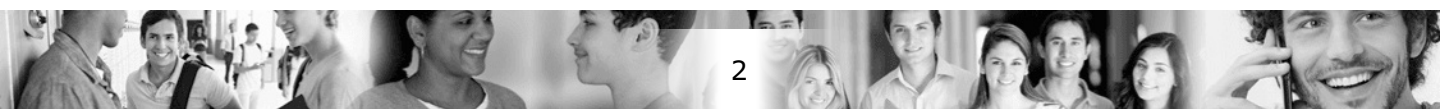

Let's Explore!

Vanessa is working the night shift again. She'll be home in the morning.

* The "night shift" is the period of time scheduled for work at night.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Vanessa: Welcome guys! Come sit down. Chill out. Don't worry. The Anderson group will come in as soon as everyone in their party arrives. So, I can hang out a little bit tonight before our big party arrives later.
- Peter: What are we drinking?
- Vanessa: Wine, from our new supplier. I had talked to the old supplier for about ten minutes today, but I felt that if we had stayed with them, we would have had more late shipments and more thirsty customers.
- Peter: Exactly! When I am here, I am always thirsty!
- Vanessa: Amy, while I'm working tonight, I am also delegating more management duties this evening. I wouldn't have been so close to burning out, if I had just relaxed a little more. I have burned the candle at both ends for far too long.
- Amy: Good to hear. Ever since Vanessa and I have been meeting, I feel like we have made some real progress.
- Vanessa: Yes, indeed. Also before the night shift, the staff and I had discussed things before and we had a real heart-to-heart. I convinced Rachel, Michael and Alexander to come back. We agreed to be more conscientious toward each other's feelings. Ahhh! If I had worked harder at school, I would have a better job than I do now.
- Peter: Haha, and if you went to bed earlier you wouldn't be so tired all the time, but that's not happening.
- Vanessa: True, but seriously, I think we would have resolved our problems if I had just listened a little more closely. I had just kept everything bottled up before, but now I'm going to try and be more amiable.
- Peter: Well, Amy and I have some news too. We had talked it over for about five minutes before we came out tonight. I suppose we have waited a little longer than we should have.
- Vanessa: Let me guess, you two are dating.
- Peter: How did you know?
- Vanessa: Have you ever wondered why the two of you connected again?
- Peter: Huh?
- Vanessa: Oh yeah. Amy wouldn't have come to the bar that night if I hadn't asked her.
- Peter: Really?
- Amy: Peter you are so cute.
- Vanessa: If Amy hadn't said anything, I would have toyed with you for the rest of the night. Anyway, raise a glass. Before we get carried away, I want to make a toast. To friends.
- Amy and Peter: To friends!
- Vanessa: You guys are the best!

Let's Practice!

Let's choose the best way to link events.

3. While I'm working tonight, I am ...
 - ☐ also delegating more management duties this evening.
 - ☐ after delegating more management duties this evening.
 - ☐ until delegating more management duties this evening.

Let's Practice!

Let's check some vocabulary to talk about relationships and character traits.

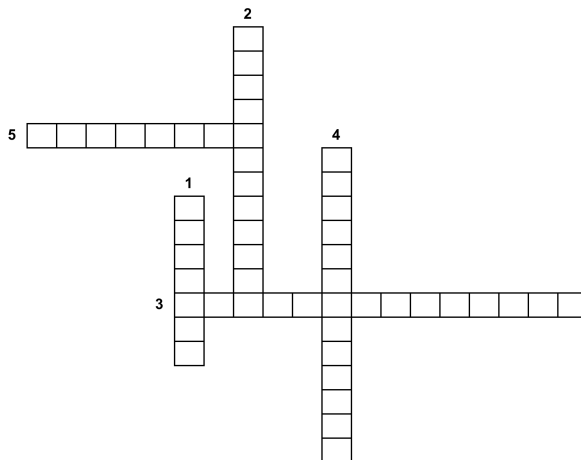

Instructions: Complete the crossword. First, read the clue. Then, write your answer.

DOWN

1. friendly and likable.
2. a conversation that is candid, intimate, and personal.
4. trying and do what is right, especially doing one's work or duty well and thoroughly.

ACROSS

3. to keep things inside you, like feelings, emotions and not share or express them.
5. to relax.

Extension Activity

Are you spending enough time with the right people?

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Make a catalog of the 15 people you spend most of your time with. They can be friends, family or co-workers.
- Then ask yourself the question: "How do I feel after spending time with these individuals?"
- Next, place a score beside each individual's name from +5 to -5 to show how you feel after spending time with this person.
- Add up the scores for the people you spend most of your time with?
- Think about how much time you spend with each individual. What are the scores for the 'pluses' and what are the scores for the 'minuses'?

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I analyze my personal relationships.

e.g. It's time you delegated a little more.
- burning the candle at both ends (expression): to work or do other things from early in the morning until late at night and so get very little rest.
e.g. Mary is studying very hard. She is really burning the candle at both ends.
- heart-to-heart (expression): a conversation that is candid, intimate, and personal e.g. We had a heart-to-heart.
- to bottle things up (expression): to keep things inside you, like feelings, emotions and not share or express them e.g. I mostly have just bottled things up.
- conscientious (adjective): trying and doing what is right, especially doing one's work or duty well and thoroughly.
e.g. Mary is a very conscientious young lady. She always works hard and does a good job.

Learning Points

Time Clauses

You can use different time conjunctions to describe events in the past, present and future. You can also express events that happen at the same time, and events that happen one after the other.

Simultaneous Actions:

as/when/while → for longer actions in progress in the background when another action happens - Progressive tenses are usually used with these words.

As they were walking along the beach, they were picking up shells and small stones.

when + the simple past in the time clause and a main clause action in a progressive tense → shows interruption The action in the time clause interrupts the action in the main clause.

I was taking a shower when he called.

while → with two longer situations happening at the same time

While he was driving, he was singing.

Consecutive Actions:

when + past simple in the time clause and past simple in the main clause → an action happening right after another - When expresses the first action.

as → two short events that happen at almost the same time

As he opened the cupboard, a cup fell out of it.

once + present perfect → if something has to be completed before something else can happen

Once I finish this course, I can apply to graduate.

before → for an action that occurred before something else happened

I have to call home before we go to the concert.

until → when the first action happens up to the time of the second action

I will be at school until my classes finish at 5 p. m.

Past Actions or Events:

when → for something that happened at a particular time in the past

I loved reading when I was a kid.

before, after, as soon as → with these expressions especially, the order of events is clear

As soon as he opened the door, everyone shouted "Happy Birthday".

time conjunction + past perfect → to emphasize the completion of one action (the one in the past perfect) before another

Learning Points

Present Actions or Events:

present simple in both clauses → for actions that are generally true - similar to the zero conditional.

Future Actions or Events:

time expression + present simple (time clause), future verb (main clause) → for future events/actions

As soon as I finish my exams, I'll leave for Europe.

time expression + present perfect (time clause), future verb (main clause) → for specific situations where it is necessary to know the time order of the events

Since I've studied more this term, I expect I'll be getting higher marks.

Examples:

- The Anderson group will come in as soon as everyone in their party arrives.
- When I am here, I am always thirsty!
- Amy, while I'm working tonight, I am also delegating more management duties this evening.
- We had talked it over for about five minutes before we came out tonight.
- Ever since Vanessa and I have been meeting, I feel like we have made some real progress.

The Unreal Past: Second, Third and Mixed Conditional

You can talk about past, present and future events that are not real by using different conditional structures in your sentences.

Second and Third Conditionals:

Second Conditional	Third Conditional
• unreal events in the present and future	• unreal events in the past
if + simple past, would + base form would + base form...if + simple past	if + past perfect, would have + past participle would have + past participle...if + past perfect
If I/you/he/she/it/we/they were... • 'be' verb: use were for all subjects • use If I were you... to give advice

Learning Points

Mixed Conditionals:

Unreal Present Events because of A Past Condition	Unreal Past Events because of A Present Condition
this is a mixed conditional because you are talking about two different times	this is a mixed conditional because you are talking about two different times when you want to imagine something about the present time that is not real because of a situation that occurred in the past	when you want to talk about something unreal that happened before now because of a present or ongoing condition
If + past perfect, would + base form of the verb would + base form of the verb... if + past perfect	If + simple past, would have + past participle would have + past participle... if + simple past

Examples:

- If you went to bed earlier, you wouldn't be so tired all the time.
- If Amy hadn't said anything, I would have toyed with you for the rest of the night.
- Oh yeah. Amy wouldn't have come to the bar that night if I hadn't asked her.
- We would have resolved our problems if I had just listened a little more closely.
- If I had worked harder at school, I would have a better job than I do now.
- I wouldn't have been so close to burning out if I had just relaxed a little more.
- If we had stayed with them, we would have had more late shipments and more thirsty customers.
